The Wesleyan Seal

How long has it been since you took a good look at the official seal on your own Wesleyan diploma? You probably remember that the figure in the middle is a girl in a flowing robe, with a few Latin words scattered around her. You may even recall the words "Scientia et Pietas" which some have translated "Education and Religion", a suitable translation for our Wesleyan College.

The motto at the top of the seal "Nimium ne crede colori" is a famous line from one of Vergil's pastoral poems. Cassell's Dictionary, the standard of excellence for classical Latin, quotes the passage, and indicates a translation such as "Don't put too much trust in outward appearance." A former Wesleyan Latin teacher, Mr. I. E. McKellar, also suggested "Put not thy trust in a pretty face." Advice for girls or for boys?

Now maybe we helped you to translate your College Seal, but from here out, we need you to help us! Betty Brender AB 57, in the Candler Memorial Library took a careful look at Catherine Brewer Benson's diploma, and found that the faintly visible lines and words are different from the present seal! What was the other seal? When was it changed? How did the present seal come to be? If you have grandmother's diploma in a trunk in the attic, get it out and look at the seal. Give us all the information that you can. We need your help!

Some Things New at Wesleyan

When students began to arrive at Wesleyan for the 124th Session which opened September 21, they were pleased to note the many fine additions and improvements on the campus. Of course, the 206 Freshmen who are attending this year only recognize them as part of an already beautiful campus!

Among the important additions to Candler Memorial Library are the photocopying machines, pictured above; a collection of 1,500 new color slides from the Carnegie Corporation—a survey of the Arts of the United States; new record albums; many additional current books and periodicals.

The photocopier, which will be widely used by faculty and students, is designed for the immediate reproduction of pages from books or periodicals, letters, sheets of music, pictures and faculty notices; and will also make permanent copies of materials for projection purposes to be used in lecture or classroom discussions.

Another exciting addition at Wesleyan is the completely modern laboratory equipped with 24 booths which has been installed for the language department. Financed by a grant from the General Board of Education of the Methodist Church and by contributions from Methodist churches in Georgia, this laboratory represents the most modern development for language departments used throughout the country in many schools. Both the faculty and students are receiving training from an RCA representative in the use of equipment which features tape recorders enabling students to hear their own voices and pronunciations of the foreign languages taught. Each booth is sound proof in order to maintain individual instruction or group instruction may be given with the turn of a switch!

Complete remodeling has been done in Taylor Amphitheatre which seats 200 and is often used as a lecture and testing room. It has been equipped with new furnishings, has been air conditioned, and installed with new ceiling and sound conditioning.

Real changes have taken place in Banks dormitory! It has been painted, rewired, and relighted and as though that wasn't enough, the students rejoiced to see that it has also been refurnished throughout with furniture of current design. This dormitory was named for the William N. Banks family of Newnan. Mrs. Banks (Evelyn Wright) is a graduate of the 1914 class and is the immediate past Alumnae Trustee. Mr. Banks has been a Trustee for Wesleyan for many years. Only last May, Evelyn was given the distinguished service award by the Alumnae Association, and it seems so fitting that the dormitory bearing the name of such distinguished Wesleyan supporters should be brought into such high standards itself.

The entire campus, the grounds and all the buildings, show the fine care that was given to them during the summer months.

It is impossible to mention all of the structural changes at Wesleyan during the summer without adding the ever important faculty changes and additions. The following are 16 new members of the faculty who represent many states and many fine schools of learning for their backgrounds: Mr. Joseph B. Aceves, Sociology; Mr. E. A. Eschmann, Mathematics; Mr. E. L. Head, English; Dr. and Mrs. G. Duncan Johnson, Physical Science and Library cataloguing respectively; Dr. Doris E. King, History and Government; Mrs. Roy A. Knight, Home Economics; Mr. Robert R. Malone, Art; Dr. Margaret E. Newhard, Spanish and Italian; Miss Louise Rivers, English; Mrs. Earl Rosar, French; Mr. Berl Carson Russell, Speech; the Rev. Allen Sanders, Religion; Dr. Leah A. Strong, U. S. Literature; Miss Betty Ann Turner, Physical Education; and Mrs. Norman P. McLean, Voice.

The returning faculty members report interesting summers of further study and travels which should prove valuable source material to be passed on to the 512 students attending the 1961-62 session at Wesleyan.

Historical Facts

Wesleyan College, operating under a charter signed in 1836, is the pioneer college for women. It has the distinction of being the first chartered college for women to confer regular college degrees. The original charter provides "That the President of the college, by, and with the consent of the Trustees, shall have power to confer all such honors, degrees, and licenses, as are usually conferred in colleges or universities". Acting under this authority President George F. Pierce, on July 16, 1840, conferred degrees upon the first class of eleven students, including at the head of the alphabetical list Catherine E. Brewer, later Mrs. C. E. Benson, mother of the late Admiral William S. Benson of the United States Navy. Her diploma is now a part of Wesleyan's historical collection.

The college, under the name of The Georgia Female College, received its charter from the Legislature of the State of Georgia on December 23, 1836. Two years later the trustees elected a president and a faculty, and on January 7, 1839, the doors of the college were opened to the public.

The enrollment at the time of the opening consisted of ninety young women and increased to one hundred and sixty-eight before the end of the first term. Many of the students had studied in the leading academies and seminaries of the South, especially the Clinton Academy, established in Jones County in 1831, which was merged with the new college by its principal, Thomas B. Slade. This merger not only brought to the college a significant group of students, but also added to the faculty in the person of Mr. Slade, a scientist who developed a surprisingly strong science department in the new college for women.

On December 19, 1843, the Georgia Conference of The Methodist Church assumed responsibility for the college, and, by an act of the State Legislature, changed the name to Wesleyan Female College. In 1878 the college became related to the North Georgia, South Georgia, and Florida conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the same relation to these three conferences continues in The Methodist Church. In 1919 a further amendment struck from the corporate name the word Female and established the present name of Wesleyan College.

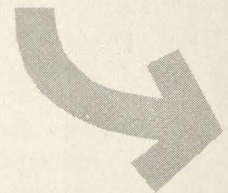

In September 1928, the Liberal Arts College was removed from its original site on College Street to the new campus in Rivoli, a suburb on the western side of Macon. For the next twenty-five years the historic buildings on College Street housed the School of Fine Arts consisting of the Conservatory of Music and the departments of art and speech. In September 1953, the School of Fine Arts was moved to the Rivoli campus.

Since that date the modern 240-acre campus has provided facilities for an outstanding program in both the Liberal and the Fine Arts. Three new buildings have been added—the Porter Family Memorial Fine Arts Building with auditorium and art galleries, the Huckabee Memorial Infirmary, and the dormitory for seniors.

Presenting . . .

The following eight pages, which are in color, are a presentation of "The Story of Wesleyan", first appearing in the September issue of "Together" magazine, a publication for Methodist families. These pictures come to you as fresh and charming as the Wesleyan girls themselves, who have adorned the campus of the first college chartered to grant degrees to women throughout the 125 years of its existence.

On the second page of this section will be seen the Thaddeus Holt Mansion the original owner being one of Wesleyan's first trustees. Wesleyan alumnae will remember Madeline Holt Duke (Mrs. J. B. Duke) daughter of the above mentioned trustee, who was in the class of 1886.

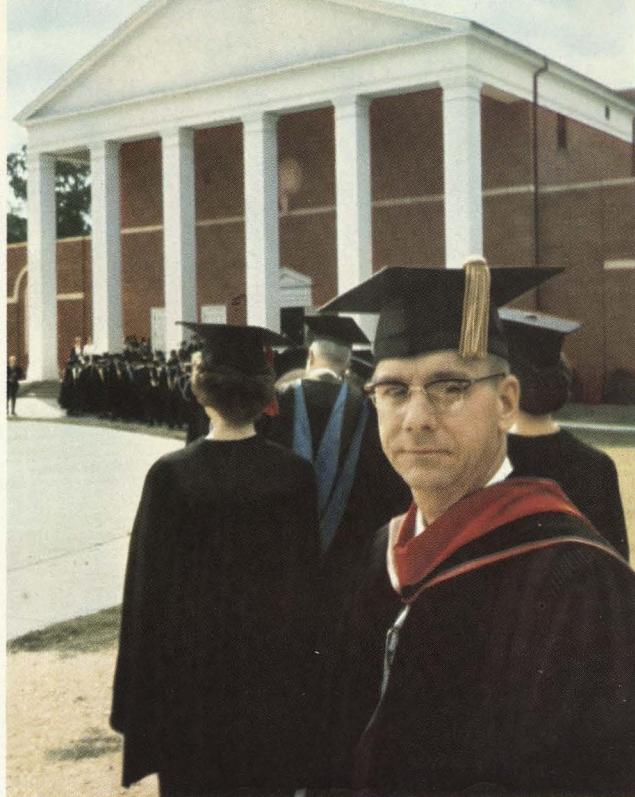

Georgia's Wesleyan College—

Always Making History

ON A 240-acre campus in suburban Macon, Ga., tall, white columns front red-brick buildings of Georgian colonial design; and on moonlit nights the soft south wind carries more than a hint of magnolias and honeysuckle. There's a sparkling blue lake, a woodland area—and traditions that go back 125 years to the founding of Wesleyan College, the first school in the world to grant degrees to women. As expected, one finds pretty girls galore, many of them Georgia's famed, soft-voiced "peaches," others with different accents from all parts of the United States and several foreign countries.

When Wesleyan was chartered in 1836 by the Georgia legislature, one representative protested that, "It is unwomanly for a girl to be educated beyond the ability to read the New Testament." For more than a century, the typical "Wesleyanne" has been a charming refutation of this claim. For she has been trained not only to be widely read but also "to become poised, gracious, and clear-thinking."

*The President: Like many before him,
W. Earl Strickland is a Methodist minister.*

In the old tradition, May Queen Pat Summey and her court pose prettily on a white-columned porch at Wesleyan.

Wai-Min Yung of Hong Kong and a portrait of Madame Chiang Kai-shek, who once boarded on the Wesleyan campus.

Old South Traditions Live On

UNLIKE MANY Southern schools, Wesleyan remained open during the Civil War. Union troops came to Macon and, on at least one occasion, a Yankee band serenaded the girls—who stopped their ears until the conductor obliged by playing Dixie. In 1867, only nine girls graduated; they wore plain cotton dresses, “unruffled and untrimmed.” Alumnae throughout the South were typical of those Civil War wives described by Henry W. Grady: “Reared in luxury, [they] cut up their dresses and made breeches for their husbands and . . . gave their hands to work.” To reach Wesleyan and an education in the Southern tradition, one girl traveled in a railroad boxcar.

While Wesleyan today is not a finishing school in the strict sense, graduates are taught to be at home on the ballroom floor or astride a hunting horse; equally well, they can sew, cook, patch, take charge of a PTA meeting or panel discussion, or teach a church-school class.

A gracious model for Wesleyan art students is Macon's Thaddeus Holt Mansion, built in the 1840s.

It's still 1961—and Pat Bonner and Emma Jones are in the room where Alpha Delta Pi, the nation's first sorority, was born. Wesleyan since has abandoned sororities.

Here Sidney Lanier Played His Flute

WHEN Sidney Lanier, the poet, returned to his home in Macon after months in a Northern prison camp, he boarded for a time on the Wesleyan campus. A musician as well as a poet, he entertained many with his flute playing—a talent which captivated his future wife, Mary Day. He found Wesleyan an island in the tumult of the times, and music a “gospel whereof the people have great need.”

Brains and Beauty Mix

Wesleyannes study by the lake or in their favorite campus nooks, but sooner or later the library calls.

Few plan careers in science, but Wesleyan girls are encouraged to explore new worlds of knowledge.

At the keyboard of one of the South's largest organs is Joyce Veal, whose father is a Methodist minister.

WESLEYAN grants degrees in the liberal and fine arts, with emphasis on religion, music, and teaching. The school has produced more than its share of church organists and choristers [see below], more than its share of preachers' wives (Emory's famed School of Theology is not far away). George F. Pierce, the first president, was a Methodist minister who later became bishop. Since then many ministers, including the current president, have served in this capacity—on the original Macon campus as well as on the present site, occupied 33 years ago.

Exercise: From the school's own stables.

Rhythm: In Wesleyan's gymnasium.

Drama: With a male student's head at stake.

Grace: With thrust and parry of the foil.

Varied Disciplines

Train for Diverse Careers

ADMISSION to Wesleyan—"intentionally small and traditionally select"—is based on character, personal qualities, and scholastic aptitude. The program, both intensively academic and extracurricular, is based on learning-by-doing. The student body includes many girls from well-to-do families—but there are scholarships, grants-in-aid, loans, and self-help opportunities for able girls who otherwise could not attend. Among 510 enrolled this year are 14 men—admitted, the girls say with tongue in cheek, so drama-conscious Wesleyanians will have male leads for their numerous stage productions.

The "Wesleyan adventure" includes many facilities beyond the classroom: a 10-acre lake, a rustic cabin, woodland trails, a golf course, a gymnasium with an indoor swimming pool, and an $800,000 fine arts auditorium. Overall, Wesleyan—where the atmosphere is decidedly Christian—has succeeded in combining the "knowledge and piety" considered by John Wesley, founder of Methodism, as vital to the "whole person."

Jan Oates, a Christian-education major, finds Pastor David Duck of Macon a helpful counselor.

Clothes—and how to make and model them—are objects of the spring fashion show.

After class, refreshment in the student center.

Tuning up: The all-girl washboard band.

Time Out for—Well, Many Things

IF THE 125-year-old traditions of Wesleyan College seem to smile down on Miss Wesleyanne of 1961, it is because she is a healthy, fun-loving girl just as inclined toward the snack bar and the late jam session as any other normal college girl. Education for life is many things; it is a part of living, but it is preparation for the future. Wesleyan is for the crucial years when a girl undergoes the transformation from adolescence to the charm and poise of the mature woman.

*Many sweethearts come to stand before this window.
But the Wesleyan story does not end here. It's just beginning!*

Discussing the Bible, students ask Dr. Walter Brown, professor of religion at Wesleyan, to pull up a chair.
